

Landscape engineer extraordinaire!

BACK FROM THE BRINK

Rabbits are the unsung engineer heroes of the Brecks. They shape the landscape and are responsible for some of the diversity of plants and animals.

Rabbits create bare ground which some of the rarest Brecks species need

Rabbits dig up stones and flints which help disguise stone curlew eggs

Rabbits break up the soil, creating microhabitats, little scrapes, slopes and holes for small plants to take root and for insects to hide in
